A fine programme has been arranged, consisting of a game of polo between the Meridians and Halcyons, exhibition skating and speed racing, and no effort will be spared to make the occasion one of rare enjoyment to all who attend. Mr. Murray, as manager last winter, deserves a significant recognition of the services rendered to the patrons of the rink, and to-night Meridian should be packed.

Going to Trial. Captain E. T. Johnson leaves to day for Washington City, where he will meet Sens tor Voorhees, and the two journey thence to Greenville, Tenn. The trial of Capt. Johnson for the killing of Major Edwin Henry will come up on the 10th proximo, and the Indiana Sepator will defend him. The indications all point to Johnson's speedy acquital, ss no jury will condemn a man who slays another in defense of his honor, especially when the seducer has added insult to injury by asserting that his innocent victim was a common woman and he fell by her acts.

A Missing Draft.

T. J. Barnes, Auditor of Tippecanoos County, settled with the State Treasurer yesterday, and while in the city made inquiries relative to a draft for $10,000 which was forwarded by John Stair, County Treasurer, on May 16. Treasurer Cooper has not received the draft, and the supposition is that the same was miscarried in the mails. The draft could not be used by other than the right party, but the officials express no little uneasiness overits loss.

Is Johnnie Insane?

John T. Woodard was sent North yesterday in charge of one of Sheriff Carter's deputies. It is said that in the eyent of the ailure of his attorneys to secure a new trial an effort will be made to have him declared insane. His friends claim that he has been deranged for some time past. Woodard's father died in a Virginia asylum when John was quite young. Woodard's mania was lottery, according to the statement of his friends.

MISS CLEVELAND.

The Book She is About to Publish Compiled from the Lectures She Has Delivered.

Chicago Tribune. WASHINGTON, May 26 - Your correspondent enjoyed an interesting conversation with Miss Cleveland this morning, in which a variety of topics were touched on, starting in with an exchange of honest compliments on the teauty of Washington in general just at this sesson and the scene about the White House, now in the perfection of May's horticultural excellence. Then we rau through the gamut of which everybody who knows anything of the small talk of Washington | the two confederates jumped into a wagon society can imagine, until I saw in the intelligent countenance of the first lady of the | to their identity. land an expression which meant, plainer than words, "Is that all that brought you here?" That brought your correspondent down to a business level and to the inquiry: 'Miss Cleveland, tell me how you enjoyed your New York trip and all about your

However, what has been printed abounds in typo traphical errors, which will surely not appear in the book; and that may add an element of for in the Illinois result-Mrs. Logan was agreeable surprise to the publication."

Is ked were the quoted chapters such as she would have preferred to make the first ingression with, and she replied. "O, I do not care anything about that, .I do not reading public for the particular manner in which my subjects are treated. The book is students at different schools within the last few vesre." "Then, with the exception of the portion you wrote in New York within the last fortnight, none of it is absolutely fresh?" 'O. yes; since it presents all my public efforts, and I only stopped working when I decided I should come here. I gave it considerable attention through the winter, so that the work was preity well on. My daties here left me no time for it. My visit to New has undertaken all the details, and, so far as I am concerned personally, I have no more to do with it until the publication day comes, in a fortuight or so. Until then the enterprising newspapers will. I know, keep me well posted as to what effect it is going to have over the land, and I suppose I must stand a good deal of notoriety from it. Of course they can not positively know anything about it, but that will only make the criticisms more readable. The book is not of a kind to suit the masses, but it will be, I hope, read by students, for whom every line of it was originally written. Those who have appreciated my life work thus far think it should seek expression in this form, and such kindly sussion and the sincerity I know which underlies it have led me to publish it at this time."

CLEVELAND BOSSED BY BIS CABINET.

Unfit Appointments Being Made-Garland's Fine Italian Hand.

[New York Herald.] It does not happen to every Attorney General to boss his chief, the President; but Mr. Garland appears to do that with President Cleveland. Unless Mr. Cleveland neglects to read the newspapers he must have known from many sources that Mr. Zachariah Montgomery was a man whom he ought not to appoint Assistant Attorney General Bit Mr. Montgomery had been a schoolfellow of the Attorney General, and this fact appears to have outweighed with the President every public consideration which made the appointment not merely injudicious, but a scandal. Well, the Attorney General had another school friend, Mr. Wickliffe of Kentucky. To him he wished to give the office of District Attorney in Kentuckey. Speaker Cartisle suggested to the President that, at the United States Marshal of the State, atready appointed and also selected by the Attorney General, had been a Rebel soldier during the war, and as Kentucky, in fact, did not secede and has a large population of Democrats who fought in the Union army, it would be proper to make a Union Democrat District Attorney. That will strike most people as a very wise and highly judicoussuggestion from Mr. Carlisle; but Mr. Garland could not see it to be so. He insisted, and the President, so to speak, "cayed in." According to a Western dispatch, which reports a conversation with Mr. Car isle, the President told that gentleman that "the Attorney General had set his heart on the appointment of Judge Wickliffe, and that in the long run he thought it best to agree with his Attorney General," and accordingly the President put in office another school friend of Mr. Garland.

We regret to see the President abdicating for which, after all, he should remember responsible by the people. The people chose him President, not that he should do the Attorney General's or any other Cabinet officer's bidding; not that he should appoint to office the personal favorites of one of his subordinates, but that he should take care of the general welfare. If he imagines that he can put responsibility for badand injudicious appointments upon the backs of his Cabinet officers he is very much mistaken.

There will be an election this fall in this State in which the President's conduct of public affairs will inevitably be in issue. His friends will not be able to plead for him that it was not be but some Cabinet officer or other subordinate who did wrong or or blundered. We respectfully advise Mr. Cleveland to assume the duties of the Presidential office as quickly as possible. Some of his constitutional advisers are leading him into a beg.

The Faded Jersey Lily.

London Letter in Cincinnati Enquirer. I regret to have to say that the general impression made by Mrs Langtry at the private views this year was that her good looks had wonderfully faded since her first appearance in London society. The beautiful complex-ion and the distinguished yet simple bear-ing remain as charming as ever, but the once levely eyes are no longer so bright. There is a fagged expression in all the features, and instead of conveying the impression of abounding health, as she once did. the lady from Jersey now seems to be delicate. Her slightness of figure adds to this effect.

The latter explained the game and worked upon the old man's cupidity such an extent that he thought he had a sure thing to win. He accordingly came to Worcester and drew $1 500 out of the savings banks. The money was placed in the hands of the advertising agent, and when the farmer lost the latter pretended that he was unwilling to surrender the money. The drover drew a pistol to enforce payment, and before the old farmer con d recover from his amazement at the re-
